Lowe's and Rebuilding Together Make Denver Community Center "Look Beautiful" » "Making people safe and secure in their neighborhoods is what we aim to do," said Alyssa, one of the captains with Rebuilding Together, a non-profit organization which teamed up with Lowe's Home Improvement to refurbish the Adventist Community Services LIFT facility in Denver, April 14. Together with Pete, also a captain, they used a less busy time while lunch was served for more than 40 volunteers, to put down new flooring in one of the center's rooms.

Alyssa has been engaged with Rebuilding Together for four years and, like many of her colleagues, has been refurbishing homes and facilities and serving communities throughout the country.

The Denver two-day project, April 13-15, involved 120 volunteers and included four homes of low-income homeowners as well as the ACS community center. Lowe's donated $84000 to the Denver rebuild project and much of the funding went to refurbish the ACS facility, giving them new showers, new flooring, remodeled classrooms, recognizing the critical services provided by ACS to the surrounding community, such as the food bank, medical care and developmental assistance.

"It's all about the community. We've learned that you can't just do one house here, one house there, but it's all a concentrated effort and it's about partnerships, which is the fabric of community. This project is a demonstration of this," said Graham McDonald, manager of corporate engagement at the national office of Rebuilding Together in Washington, D.C.

Commenting for NewsNuggets, McDonald said that the Denver project meant more than 1,000 hours of service. "We were able to overcome some of the difficulties with the flooring and carpeting with the strength of our volunteers," he said, paying tribute to those involved with repairing the neighborhood.

Among the volunteers was Paul D. Lopez, councilman for the Barnum Neighborhood. Deborah Jackson, ACS LIFT Director, recognized the services given to her center as more than crucial, but also as a joint-community affair. Lopez's personal involvement is seen as an example of "being with the community."

Opened in 1951, ACS has been in continuous operation, serving up to 350 people per week, according to Navanta Antoine-Griffith, administrative assistant and bookkeeper at the Denver center. The center's staff believes that the newly re-done project will bring more clients.

A renovation of the ACS center "will make our clients feel that they are very much valued," said Jackson. "This place didn't always look very nice. But now, our clients will see this facility as beautiful, and they will see that they are valued. We will start our workforce development here, install computers and hold classes about healthy living, exercise and nutrition and we also hope to become a part of the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP, formerly known as the Food Stamp Program) through which we can actually qualify people for food stamps."

Jackson wants to have the center also be seen as environmentally friendly. "Our garden is organic and our food is natural. We are trying to meet people at their needs." The Lowe's involvement with the project included creating edible landscaping in the front area of the center.

People who are homeless also visit the ACS center. "Now, we will be able to increase the help we give in finding jobs, writing resumes, helping to find housing, things we were not able to do before," Jackson commented. But "we will need donations and will need to increase our promotion of the healthy lifestyle in the Denver metro community."

Jackson hopes that the church will "see how valuable this service is. The church responded and then we were in turmoil for awhile. We hope the church will see what value we offer. We are hoping that the church will not only help in volunteering, but also in the financial aspect of our work," she appealed.

Story Guidelines: We want to share your news! »

News Nuggets is your publication. We strive to provide news and information that expresses our church life. Every church, every family, every individual has a story to tell. We are inviting pastors and secretaries of churches and institutions within the Rocky Mountain Conference to share with us relevant information – about developments, issues, notable events, as well as experiences of church members.

Please email your story to nuggets@mcsda.org so we can share how God is working through His people in your territory. When submitting your story, please include the following: the Ws (who, what, where, when, why..also how), a personal quote, a photo and the name of the photographer.

Any amount of money will help. Visit www.ACSliff.org or mail donations to: ACS LIFT, 5045 West 1st Avenue, Denver, CO 80219. [Text and photos by Rajmund Dabrowski]

The image shows a group of students in a classroom, focused on a large whiteboard project. The whiteboard is divided into several sections, each with a title and handwritten notes, and is decorated with numerous colorful sticky notes. The sections include:

- Essential Questions: A central section with the title "Essential Questions" and the subtitle "Community & Science Related". It contains several questions and sticky notes.
- Littering: A section titled "Littering" with notes about "Littering makes neighborhoods look worse" and "Littering is bad for the environment".
- Environment: A section titled "Environment" with notes about "Littering makes neighborhoods look worse" and "Littering is bad for the environment".
- Homeless/ Food: A section titled "Homeless/ Food" with notes about "Can we help get them food?" and "Why doesn't the government make more work buildings?".
- Can we help get them food?: A section titled "Can we help get them food?" with notes about "Can we find these jobs?" and "Can we improve this?".

The students are actively engaged with the project. One student is pointing at a sticky note on the "Environment" section, while others are looking at the board or writing. The whiteboard is a collaborative workspace where the students are exploring the issue of homelessness and its connection to the environment and food.

At the beginning of the school quarter, students were asked the question, "How can we help our community?" After two days of brainstorming and narrowing down ideas, the students came up with two more questions, "How can we help the homeless in Pueblo and how can we help raise health awareness?"

The students came up with "Healthy Helping Hands: A Daystar Christian School fundraiser for the Pueblo Rescue Mission and an event to raise health awareness."

Collaboration, communication, problem solving, time-management skills and research -- these are all real-world skills that cannot be learned from a worksheet.

"PBL has been fun and exciting and it makes me feel important to be able to help the community," states Pedro Crisosto, a 6th grader at Daystar.

"I am thrilled to see my students understand that they have the skills and resources to make a difference in their world," states Michelle Velbis, teacher and principal at Daystar.

Please consider time constraints and always send in fresh new stories instead of outdated ones. Submission deadlines are Wednesdays by noon.

Two more ministries within the conference were identified, making a total of 17 active prison ministries. A start-up ministry had many questions and one church representative was searching to know which direction to go. They were both able to get answers.

The devotional text came from Job 12:9: "The hand of the Lord has done this" and the conference was a perfect example of that.

The next phone conference will take place July 17.

Existing prison ministries should fill out and return the quarterly forms to Common Ground Church, Attention: Enid Almeida, PO Box 15640, Colorado Springs, CO 80935. These will be mailed to the North American Division in compliance with their request.

Email Enid at fokcee2@comcast.net for a copy of the forms.
