Happy Birthday, Newday! » These were the first words by Pastor Dave Kennedy welcoming more than 140 members and guests at the official inaugural worship of the new church plant in Downtown Denver. The new congregation was established by Parker's Newday Christian Seventh-day Adventist Church, referred to as a "church in two locations," and meets in the Five Point neighborhood at a well-known historic African-American church -- Cleaves Memorial CME Church.

On Sabbath afternoon, March 31, Kennedy did not hide excitement about the mission potential of the church in reaching out into the community, "seeking the good of the city."

As the launch was taking place on the Easter weekend, Kennedy preached a sermon on the meaning of resurrection of Jesus Christ. He challenged the doubters and skeptics of what happened in Jerusalem 2,000 years ago, he listed historical facts surrounding the belief in the Jesus' being "raised from the dead," and declared that "Resurrection [of Jesus] is the foundation of Christianity," he told the congregation.

For the ministers and their team the launch was the culmination of nine months of praying and planning and working. Kennedy also commented that their "team has really sacrificed a lot to leave the comfort of the church they knew in Parker and to come to this new place to start a new work. But what we saw today was a great payoff. To see such a diverse gathering from so many different backgrounds was amazing.”

"Every act, every deed of justice and mercy and benevolence, makes heavenly music in heaven."

The Sabbath gathering saw new families from the neighborhood, friends and family the Newday church members personally invited. The congregation also included members from other local churches who came out to support the new church plant. “It was such a high day!” Kennedy remarked.

Welcoming the new church community, Eric Nelson, VP for administration of the Rocky Mountain Conference, said that “we don’t just need another church, but we need a group of people who will reach out to the community with the love of Jesus. We don’t just need to share religion, but we need a body of believers that experience a real relationship with Jesus and share this with those they come in contact with.”

He added, “We pray for the success of the efforts of Pastors David Kennedy and Edwin Vargas, and those who join to be led and blessed by the Lord as they take up this work.”

Commenting for the NewsNuggets, Dave Kennedy shared that their “goal is to be a blessing to our community that if we were ever to leave, they would grieve losing us. We want to be an asset. We want to be a light shining in the midst of darkness. That means we’re going to continue to assess needs, find the best places to serve, and learn the best ways to make an impact.”

He also encourages Adventists from the greater Denver area “to come and visit, if they have a heart for city ministry, or if they know people in the downtown area they’d like to bring.”

As participants left the service, they received a bag of supplies to be given out to the homeless on their route home.

Committee Told » Reporting to the RMC Executive Committee on April 3, Ed Barnett, president, said that “for the next five years, we will push to reclaim our former church members,” a vision which recently was also addressed at the pastors’ meetings. Plans include providing local churches and pastors with materials that would address the issues, he said.

He also said “We’ve got to seek to make our churches loving congregations.” Among the issues to make this happen, Barnett stated that local church “power struggles have to change.”

Concluding his President’s Report, he expressed a challenge for the church. “We’ve got to share Jesus throughout our territories,” he stated. Remarking about his upcoming local evangelistic meeting in Sheridan, Wyoming, he also commented that “one of the outgrowths of the metro meeting with Shawn Boonstra has been discussion by various regions to have one in other metro areas,” including one in the Northeast, Colorado Springs and Grand Junction areas.

In his financial report, George Crumley, RMC VP for finance, said that “through the first two months of our new fiscal year, the conference operating fund is performing better than budgeted. The primary reason for this is the return of a strong tithe, an unanticipated revenue inflow and expenses being under what was budgeted.”

Crumley commented that it is still early in the fiscal year, but so far operations are giving RMC a positive outlook. Additionally, the Campion Warehouse is under contract and is on track for a potential closing the first part of May. “If, indeed, this ends up being sold, it will have a positive impact on both the conference and Campion Academy,” Crumley added.

As reported at a previous meeting, the ABC year end statement had a loss of around $31,000. Crumley shared that “the loss was around $13,000 instead of the larger amount initially reported because of an overstatement of cost of goods sold on the original report. Even though we still had a loss, it was not as large as was initially thought.” He commented that the “main challenge will be knowing how to increase revenue for our ABC since expenses are being managed carefully.”

In an update about the future of the RMC literature evangelism program, conference administration plans a consultation with Matt Hasty, coordinator of a similar program in Illinois. According to Eric Nelson, RMC VP for administration, RMC is committed to providing continuing funding for the program. Personnel change requires consultation.

The committee approved the transition of Nueva Esperanza Church in Arvada to full church status.

The meeting concluded with three reports. On behalf of the RMC Youth Department, Shannon Werner, student evangelism and programs coordinator reported on the 2018 Kaleo mission trip to La Vida Mission, in Farmington, New Mexico. Participants held a Vacation Bible School and week of prayer as well as work projects on houses and dorms.

Kiefer Dooley, assistant youth director shared information about preparation for Summer Camps involving 65-70 young adult staff mainly recruited from Adventist colleges. The on-line registration is going well with more than 300 of the expected 600 camp registrations already in, Kiefer said. He also informed the committee members about the upcoming “Love Reality Tour” evangelism in Greeley and Grand Junction this summer. These outreach events are aimed at attracting youth and young adults.

A second report was given by Mickey Mallory, RMC ministerial director, who has just competed five months of ministry in the conference. “I have been getting to know pastors and churches. We also just completed the organization of my first pastors meeting at GVR,” he reported.

Don Reeder, principal of Champion Academy gave the final report of the meeting, sharing three goals for the academy. “Our objectives are to draw our students, teachers and staff closer to Jesus, as per John 12:32; aim for solid academics; and secure financial stability for the school,” Reeder stated. Among immediate plans is for students to provide the week of prayer this year. “These are the same students who will be preaching for the summer Wildfire evangelism outreach,” he added.

The next Executive Committee meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, June 5.

Mission and Ministry on March 11.

An OB/GYN in private practice before pursuing pastoral ministry, Shadle believes in a whole person model of care, which is part of his personal mission statement. He also desires to “provide spiritual care for associates and physicians working in Adventist hospitals in Centura” and to “love, listen, and learn each day.”

Shadle’s associates are “beginning to focus on an at-risk neighborhood in each of our hospital service areas” with the goal of “extending the healing ministry of Christ to the people living in these neighborhoods. The group will “partner with key faith and community stakeholders.”

Believing that “spirituality is a key component of health, Shadle will seek to partner with our churches to support the spiritual care of individuals and communities.”

In the past, Global Health Initiatives has had a strong overseas mission emphasis. As Shadle takes on the VP role, he says, “I will be working with our Global Health Initiatives team to continue to strengthen our overseas mission partnerships.”

NewsNuggets will continue to share news from Centura Health’s Mission and Ministry as Shadle works with his team to develop an overall strategic plan for the five Adventist Health System hospitals that fit into the overall framework of Centura Health to integrate mission. According to Shadle, this will be done in the following areas: Leadership, Team, Patient Experience, Community, and Environment.

Campion Students and Staff Hold Dress-Up Contest Around Heroes and Villains »

Campion Academy held a "Heroes and Villains" dress-up day, adding some spice to a week that was already showing signs of spring by giving students and staff the opportunity to dress up as their favorite hero and villain.

Students came dressed as characters anywhere from Sleeping Beauty and Maleficent, to Tom and Jerry. It was "...a great way to take a break from school work and have some fun," Manny said. "It felt like it brought the school together," he finished.

Chrisheline said, "My favorite part was getting together with friends to make the costumes."

At Wednesday's assembly, the heroes and villains paraded

The Body Was Made to Heal Itself » Many citizens of Planet Earth seem to accept the occurrence of such diseases as diabetes, infertility, and Alzheimer's as normal, yet anthropological evidence suggests that earlier humans didn't experience these diseases. They aged gracefully without degenerative diseases like osteoporosis. They were naturally lean and fit, fertile through their childbearing years, and slept peacefully and deeply. What has changed?

Looking at American culture, we see people running from one activity to another, stressed beyond imagining, or we see people sitting for long hours, working before a computer screen or looking at the screen of a television or a mobile phone. Stress and lack of exercise play havoc on the body, preventing it from making the repairs it wants to make.

The pharmaceutical industry promotes medications that, in most cases, do nothing more than cover up the symptoms of disease. Health could be re-established if we would correct the underlying cause of a disease rather than covering up the symptoms.

Another change since our more-healthy ancestors walked the earth, is the bombardment of toxins on our environment. Even aside from environmental toxins, the average American regularly consumes many food toxins. These include:

- 1) cereal grains (especially refined flour)
- 2) Omega-6 industrial seed oils (corn, cottonseed, safflower, soybean, etc.),
- 3) sugar (especially high-fructose corn syrup)
- 4) processed soy (soy milk, soy protein, soy flour, etc.)
- 5) abundance of refined salt

If I were fighting cancer or diabetes or any of the myriad diseases that overwhelm so many of us, I would cut out as many external and internal toxins as possible. It makes sense to give my body the best fighting power available. After all, our bodies were made to be “self-constructing, self-maintaining, self-directing, self-repairing, self-defending, and self-healing.” (You Are Not What You THOUGHT, Kalua, 2018)

Many of you will remember riding your bicycle as a kid, then falling off and skinning your knee, Kalua says in her book. It bled for a while, but eventually stopped, formed a scab which, after a week or so, fell off, revealing beautiful, new skin. How did that happen?

If you think about it a bit, you’ll realize that the bleeding was a self-defending process, cleaning out the wound. When the blood coagulated, we saw an example of self-maintenance. As the scab formed, the self-repairing process was at work and then, when the scab fell off, we realize we’d experienced self-healing and self-constructing.

We did nothing to bring this about. Our bodies were made to be self-directing. A loving Father designed this healing process long before we were created.

Why wouldn’t God use these same principles to heal diseases of the body? I believe He would and does. Our job is to follow His commands. He did say He would bring “none of these diseases” on us if we followed His instructions. (Exodus 15:26)

We all know about the principles of health – nutrition, exercise, water, sunlight, temperance, air, rest, and trust. But do we take them seriously or do we say, “Yah, yah. I’ve heard all that before,” not accepting that these principles are powerful concepts working synergistically to bring about health?

In her new, upcoming book, You Are Not What You THOUGHT, Loli Kalua uses simple language to explain fundamental aspects of how the body works and what it requires to maintain and restore health. Placing the reader barefoot on a beautiful beach with a glass of pure water in hand, she gently breaks through the wall of commonly-held beliefs and attitudes to reveal truth and hope for the sufferer. Her conversational style makes for easy reading and understanding as she explains how to stop taking in toxins and honor our bodies so that we can restore health.

Monte Wolford was the first winner of the Pikes Peak Marathon, the third oldest marathon in the U.S. (after Boston and New York marathons). He was a member of the Central Seventh-day Adventist Church in Colorado Springs, which he joined Wolford by transfer of membership in 1955.

On August 10, 1956, he ran the Pikes Peak inaugural race, competing as a vegetarian bodybuilder, and won in a field of 14 men. His time: 5:39:58 on the course that boasts over 7,800 vertical feet. - The primary readership of the newsletter are church members within the Rocky Mountain Conference.
- When submitting an announcement, consider that local Sabbath events may be drawing members from other local churches.
