Master Violin Class Held at Mile High Academy » A recent visit of violist Jaime Jorge to Mile High Academy on March 31 became a special occasion for a group of young, aspiring violin students to not only listen to his performance, but to join in a mini music session.

Students who were selected to participate in this special class performed in front of Mr. Jorge and heard his comments and valuable lessons. Demonstrating his passion for music education, Mr. Jorge gave each student pointers and hints he has used in his own musical education.

Reacting to this opportunity, fifth-grader Diego Luna stated, "In my opinion, he [Jaime Jorge] is one of the best violinists. "I like playing for him. I want to become better and he gave me advice on how to do that."

Academy freshman, Kiyana Carey, stated, "I wanted to know how to become great like Mr. Jorge. This short session [with Mr. Jorge] showed me how relatable a great violinist can be and how helpful to learning violinists."

Jaime Jorge's story is unique. At the age of ten, he immigrated to the United States and began studying with eminent violinist Cyrus Forough. Though initially entering the University of Illinois School of Medicine in 1994 in pursuit of becoming a missionary doctor, two years later, he left medical school to devote himself to full-time music ministry.

Over the years, he has traveled to more than 40 countries and six continents performing more than three thousand concerts. He has recorded seventeen albums. Bible-time Characters Visit Worland High School »

For Dick Stenbakken, a well-known first-person presenter of Bible characters, a visit to Worland, Wyoming Seventh-day Adventist Church had all the features of a homecoming. Stenbakken was the pastor in the Worland Church from 1965-1969.

"It was a real joy to walk into the church I designed and built, but even more it was thrilling to see the fruits of one's labor and meet some of those I have not seen for decades," Stenbakken told NewsNuggets.

"Meeting church members who are in their nineties, and one who is 102 years old, was especially meaningful," Stenbakken said. "These are real frontiersmen with strong faith and a salt-of-the-earth type people."

Stenbakken's visit received a front-page cover article in the Worland paper, Northern Wyoming Daily News, prior to his visit. The paper shared his comments that shared his homecoming memories.

"Stenbakken began his pastoral career in Worland and while in Worland, he helped build the Seventh-day Adventist Church that is being used now in Worland. Stenbakken explains how the church was built, 'It was all self-funded and we had a small congregation, but everybody pitched in. We did hire a general contractor, a guy out of Buffalo. We basically, including myself, dug the footings and foundation and laid the block and mixed the mortar and did the painting and put down the carpet,'" Stenbakken told the Daily News.

"We did most of the work on our own, simply because we needed to keep the cost down and everybody was involved. We did hire qualified electricians and plumbers and things like that. When it came to pouring the concrete and the floor, we did that by wheelbarrow on our own, mixed it up in the back and everybody got in there and did it. It was a labor of love."

His visit included performances for the community of his re-enactments of "Faces around the Cross" at the Worland High School Little Theater March 31-April 2. He also had a moving performance at the Sabbath church service.

The presentations included first-person re-enactments of such Bible characters as Apostles John and Judas, Caiaphas and the Centurion. "Professionally prepared, powerfully presented first-person narratives can pull a viewer into the

Pie Auction in Greeley Rolls Out Cash for Van »

With Lonnie Hetterle, RMC education director, as auctioneer and 200 people in attendance at the recently-held Greeley Adventist School's 10th annual pie auction, the school raised $8,820. Two pies went for more than $500.

"This is a very innovative way to raise money for the school and no one does it better," stated Hetterle.

Seventy pies in total were auctioned to constituents of the school, which include members of Greeley, The Adventure, Elm Haven and Spanish churches. Students at the school come from these churches and, according to Principal Jerry Groeneweg, 47 students are enrolled this school year.

Many homemade as well as store-bought pies made it onto the auction block and included banana cream, apple, cherry, peanut butter and other mouth-watering names, which went for an average of around $127.50 each.

A bidding war between Pastor Mitch Williams and his friend David Stewart began over the banana cream pie, but there is no report of the results.

Two footstools crafted by Paul Hetterle were also available for bidding at the auction. Father of Lonnie Hetterle, Paul has had a long-time interest in Christian education.

The proceeds of this year's auction were used to purchase a newer van for transporting students. [Text and photos by

A CULTURE OF CHRISTIAN FRIENDSHIP

"But how does the gospel have it that we are Christ's friends? By obeying his command, which is to love one another as he loved us. Such friendship (or love) is cruciform, since Jesus ultimately loved us by dying on a cross. We are Christian friends by living cruciformly, by giving ourselves rather than imposing ourselves. Christian friendship is not a matter of managing or controlling others, but of genuinely accepting their differentness and standing open to surprises - surprises that, whether joyful or demanding, extend our powers to achieve greater excellence in the practice of friendship epitomized on the cross.

So in John's Gospel we have a new language of friendship, a language of participation instead of management. Cruciform and subversive friendship, as opposed to managerial friendship, is attentive rather than manipulative, organic rather than technical, relational rather than rational, open-ended rather than calculating. The New Testament language and enculturation of friendship is more that of abiding than that of profiting. Its most likely metaphors for friendship are organic and agricultural rather than economic or managerial: the disciple does not "invest" in friendship so much as he or she is "grafted" onto the vine or participates in the body where friendship flourishes.

In this light, the church's immediate and extended task on behalf of friendship is the freeing task of proclaiming and embodying the gospel and, in so doing, teaching and cultivating an alternative language, a contrast culture, for friendship -- a language and culture that support friendship as a full-fledged social, political practice and enable it to realize more of its rich potential.

. . . The promise of Christian friendship is not that it will always be easy or enjoyable, but that it will never be less than friendship.

So here is how the church can engender and support the community-building, subversive practice of friendship: by speaking its own language of friendship and celebrating its own culture of friendship."

Keep Looking: How Do You Read Your Bible? »

Have you noticed that there are many ways that individuals read the Bible. Just look around your congregation this Sabbath. Likely, you'll notice phones and tablets in use, loaded with Bible apps and print Bibles of various sizes. Do you spot anyone listening to their Bible? Is anyone reading a Braille Bible? Perhaps an individual may need to put his electronic device or print Bible close to his nose to make the print easier to read.

If you continue looking, chances are there is someone who does not own a Bible or or Sabbath School lesson in a format that they can read. Did you know that Christian Record

Young Men Join Church Known for Age and Wisdom

» Montrose Church considers baptisms fresh and important news even when reported in outdated fashion. This event still feels new because the baptisms of Vova Saye, a young teen with Adventist background, and Jesse Bugos, a twenty-something new convert, represent revival and ongoing life in a congregation known more for its "age and wisdom."

These young men chose to be baptized on September 26, 2015, in a cold mountain lake near Silver Jack Reservoir, also known as the traditional site for Western Slope Cowboy Camp Meeting. Pastor Fritz Krieger officiated while supportive friends and church members gathered around to sing and praise God. The boys were each given a nice tool bag with "tools" such as a Bible, devotional book and snack treats.

Both young men are involved at church with music, telling children's stories for church, and are great volleyball players with the church group on Saturday nights. Jesse is helping teach teen Sabbath School and is also giving Bible studies and bringing people to church. We love these boys! [Karyl Krieger]

FROM THE EDITOR

We want to share your news -- Change is a part of the communication age. With online media experiencing constant evolution, the NewsNuggets is also experiencing an increased access from our readers and contributors. We will continue to encourage news sharing from our churches, institutions, and individual church members.

In order to make our eNewsletter accommodate an increased volume of announcements, our editorial work proposes to present information in a more efficient approach, ensuring that all timely promotions and announcements be included in a weekly, Friday release of NewsNuggets. Submission deadline for stories, news, and announcements is at noon on every Wednesday.

Please send all your submissions to nuggets@rmcsda.org.

Thank you for your contribution, but also comments, as NewsNuggets continues to serve the church in an efficient and effective way.

We are inviting all correspondents and contributors to follow a general Adventist News Network Style Guide, including glossary. For guidelines, see: <http://news.adventist.org/styleguide/>
