New Downtown Church Partners with Park Hill Church for Worship and Community Outreach

» Newday Adventist Church in Parker is just two weeks away from officially launching their second location in downtown Denver. The 40 church members, who make up the core team, have been learning about what ministry in an urban context looks like. Their primary teachers were other churches in the area for years serving their communities. One such church is the Park Hill Seventh-day Adventist Church, a primarily African-American congregation in the Park Hill community.

On Sabbath, March 3, Newday Denver and Park Hill had a joint worship service at Park Hill's location. They formed a blended choir and worship team, and members from both churches were represented in the service. They talked about issues of injustice, and what it means to love our neighbors. Pastors Robert Davis from Park Hill, and Dave Kennedy from Newday team, jointly taught a sermon based on Jesus' story about the Good Samaritan. After a lively worship service, the two churches enjoyed a fellowship lunch together.

A feature of the Sabbath was an after-lunch mission outreach with members from both churches going out into the Five Points neighborhood in small groups. They went door to door and prayed with people. Members of the Park Hill Church were partnered with members of Newday to train them on this form of urban ministry. Some 50 people took part in the outreach, with about 25 from Newday, and Park Hill each. After their time in the community, members gathered at Newday's church to debrief their experience. Members from both churches shared exciting stories about the people they encountered, and the positive experiences they had reaching out to the community together.

Pastor Dave Kennedy, who was partnered together with Jeff Harris, an elder from Park Hill, shared during the debrief how good it is to work together in a community that for the most part is racially segregated. "We are people with good news," he commented. "What we just did in working together to reach our community gives credibility to the gospel, and the church."

Newday Denver is located at 2222 Marion Street in Denver. They officially launch their Sabbath services on March 31 at 4:00 pm. For more information, go to www.newdaysda.com.

Kaleo Project Responds to La Vida Mission

Needs » Their journey to La Vida Mission, an RMC church and school in northwestern New Mexico, began March 4 with a temporary breakdown in Castle Rock, a blustery trip down I-25 and a blizzard as they drove over Cumbres Pass.

Undaunted, the group of nine young volunteer missionaries with RMC's Kaleo Project eagerly blessed the Indian population at the mission through a variety of service projects and sharing.

The original plan was to take the students to Mexico City where they would work at a school to rebuild the music building damaged in the two recent earthquakes, according to Kaleo Project director, Shannon Werner, but because of parent concerns about safety and lodging logistics in Mexico City, that trip was cancelled. Leaders came up with Plan B, but without the time to promote the new destination and with area academies doing their own mission trips (Campion Academy took youth to Belize during this time), the trip was much smaller than the 30 or so students they previously took to the

Although they had requests from other parts of the world, the Kaleo Project leadership chose to bless La Vida Mission, a self-supporting missionary endeavor with an historic, supportive partnership with the Rocky Mountain Conference.

Since both the boy's and girl's dormitory decks were sagging, they pitched in to rebuild them, using new materials they purchased for the mission and installing joists to replace the sagging ones in cold, 15-degree weather. Chuck Henry, an adult sponsor, spoke with La Vida's project manager to ask him what tools he should bring for the projects they would be working on. "Pray over your tools and see what God would have you bring," he was told. He brought them all.

During the evening, students preached an evangelistic series attended by the students and staff of La Vida Mission, along with a few of the locals. Having preached just once before during the Hawaiian mission trip in 2017, Brook Henry, and others, gave presentations on creation, salvation, the gospel health, and the state of the dead. A children's program was held at the same time as the evangelistic series.

Kean Jagitsch, one of the youth on the mission trip was excited about the trip because he wants "to someday be involved in Native American ministry."

Taking advantage of the location, the group visited Chaco Canyon, a former center of culture for the Ancient Pueblo Peoples, to see the ruins and petroglyphs left by the Chacoans. Scientists believe that many of their buildings may have been aligned to capture the solar and lunar cycles which required generations of astronomical observations and centuries of skillful building.

On the last day of the mission trip, March 11, the group traveled to Pagosa Springs where they enjoyed the river and the hot springs, jumping into the cold water of the river when the hot springs became too hot and then returning to the springs to warm up.

Story Guidelines: We want to share your news! »

News Nuggets is your publication. We strive to provide news and information expressing our church life. Every church, every family, every individual has a story to tell. We are inviting pastors and secretaries of churches and institutions within the Rocky Mountain Conference to share with us relevant information -- about developments, issues, notable events, as well as experiences of church members.

Please email your story to nuggets@rmcsda.org so we can share how God is working through His people in your territory. When submitting your story, please include the following: the Ws (who, what, where, when, why...also how), a personal quote, a photo and the name of the photographer.

Castle Rock Young Adults Practice "Church Ownership" »

Ministry to youth and young adults in their local context, and creating an environment for connecting with God and other peers was at the center of a one-day young adult rally hosted by the Castle Rock Seventh-day Adventist Church plant, March 10.

Anil Kanda, director of senior youth and young adult ministries for Central California Conference, shared messages with more than 50 young adults entitled, "Conqueror: The Heart of God." Kanda explored the lives of Jacob, Joshua, and David to pinpoint factors that lead to spiritual victory in our own lives.

"That was amazing," reflected a young father. "I never experienced this kind of togetherness with other young adults back home," shared a new Colorado resident.

It was "more than just creating an environment for connecting with God and other peers. This rally was about modeling something bigger," reported Godfrey Miranda, Castle Rock Church plant pastor. He added that "while the event started out as the idea of the RMC Youth Department, in the end, the ownership was felt by the local church and its young adults." Miranda acknowledged the blessing of having "conference support to spark momentum for efforts on the local level."

Commenting on the primary goal of the youth ministry throughout RMC, Steve Hamilton, director, commented that the department "isn't to do the work of ministry for churches." Rather, maximum impact happens "when we can empower churches to minister to youth and young adults in their local context."

That kind of impact happens not just when a conference empowers a church, but also when a church empowers its younger generation, Hamilton explains. What our 20-and-30-somethings need most is a community of faith that leans on them "to make significant kingdom impact, entrusting them with meaningful responsibility, so it becomes church," he says, referencing the impact of the Castle Rock rally.

Not just attending the rally inspired Brent Learned, a Castle Rock young adult, but helping plan the event. Explaining his involvement, he said, “I have seen many young people walk right out the back door of their parents’ churches because they never had the opportunity to own the church themselves and be personally invested in its vision and mission.”

“I get to lead the change away from apathy and toward growth for me personally and for the church.”

The Castle Rock Church launched in April 2017 with a handful of committed families and has become the church home for nearly twenty households. According to Miranda, the church exists to make passionate followers of Christ who SEEK God, SHARE life, and SERVE the world.

Jonathan Leonardo Brings The Love Reality Tour to Rocky Mountain Conference » Geared toward our youth, yet cross-generational in nature, The Love Reality Tour is coming to the Greeley and Grand Junction churches in April. A native of the Dominican Republic, and currently serving out of Nashville and Honolulu, speaker Jonathan Leonardo believes you can revolutionize your walk with Jesus during this journey through the Gospel.

“So many people today are looking for love,” says Kiefer Dooley, assistant youth director for Rocky Mountain Conference. “They feel an emptiness in their heart, but can’t find anything to fill the void. They have trouble identifying their value, purpose, and worth.” Leonardo’s powerful worship and transformational messages can change that.

“His love is stronger than death,” exclaims Leonardo. “It is a love that will cast out sin.”

“The Love Principal is what really grabbed me,” said one man who attended the tour.

“If you are interested in understanding the depth of who God is, we have to take a look at love itself,” asserts Leonardo.

Youth, other church members, townspeople, anyone interested are invited to attend. Marketing is a grass-roots effort with church youth inviting their friends. The youth department will target the event and provide promotional material on Facebook and youth groups will pass out invitation cards door-to-door.

The two-part series focuses first on the basics of our identity and who we are because of Jesus, followed by how our new understanding of our identity informs our beliefs.

“The messages impacted my life in terms of my confidence in the gospel message and what that looks like for me to apply it on a day-to-day basis,” says Dooley. “It’s freeing.” He continues, “Jesus’ sacrifice defeated sin for us and it makes surrendering almost effortless. “It’s a complete perspective shift.”

The messages will give a fresh way to look at the gospel, energize membership, and create more engaged youth. The tour could produce a revival in the church.

Vista Ridge Academy Hosts The Town of Erie Candidates Forum » Vista Ridge Academy hosted the Town of Erie Candidates Forum presented by the Erie Chamber of Commerce and moderated by the League of Women Voters on March 8.

The Erie community was invited to meet and listen to the candidates for the upcoming Town of Erie mayoral and Board of Trustees election on April 3.

Erie Chamber of Commerce Executive Director, Elle Cabbage, and Administrative Assistant, Cory Thompson, organized the event. “This was the largest one that we ever had and it was the best planned out [forum], and I attribute that to the student ambassadors of Vista Ridge Academy and all their staff. We could never have done this event without all their help, and we are appreciative to all of them,” said Cabbage.

When asked why the forum is important, Cabbage replied, "It is always important for the people in any community to take part in their elections, and I think a lot of people, with our count close to 300, came out tonight to find out more about what is happening in our community."

Franktown Women's Ministry Group Assembles Newborn Care Packages »

Franktown Women's Ministry ladies assembled 104 newborn care packages March 4 and delivered them to Castle Rock and Parker Adventist hospitals later that week.

Containing receiving blankets, diapers, onesies, sleepers, A&D ointment, baby body wash or shampoo, items needed by a newborn, the packages blessed 104 mothers and babies in need in Douglas County.

Even before the bundles could be unloaded, one nurse already had someone in mind who needed these supplies.
