October is Pastor Appreciation Month. Let's Pray for our Pastors and Let Them Know They're Appreciated.

Marriage Seminar Held for Hispanic Members » "At first, we thought the project would be a failure because the applications coming into the Conference office were few," said Frank Wilson, RMC pastor. "There were only five couples who had initially registered for the marriage seminar in Colorado Springs," he added.

The hotel reservations were made, the speakers were poised, the banquet was planned, the flyers were waiting-- everything was ready. But after learning that the couples retreat was not going according to plan, their hope dwindled and planners began to think that they might have to cancel.

"We have to pray with our eyes on God, not on the difficulties."

But, God had another plan. "When we learned that our initial plan wouldn't work, our Hispanic coordinator, Ruben Rivera wondered if we could put into motion Plan B, which would change the event from retreat to seminar, and invite all couples from the metro area," said Wilson

"As soon as people got wind of the change, the applications poured in," Wilson added, "going from ten to twenty, to forty to fifty-one."

Pastor Wayne Morrison provided the group with a beautiful place for the seminar, the annex of Brighton English Church.

All 51 couples who attended heard timely and much-needed messages given by Pastor Trino and Luz Marina Aparicio from Chattanooga Tennessee.

Numbers Grow at Glacier View Ranch and Mills Spring Ranch »

What would it take to qualify seven days as the highlight of your year? For many kids it's a week of summer camp at one of the Rocky Mountain Conference camps – Glacier View Ranch or Mills Spring Ranch.

The summer began in early June with close to 80 dedicated young adults coming together for a week of staff training, mentoring and bonding at Glacier View Ranch. The theme that would infiltrate every aspect of camp was "I Am". Out of that one week of training came seven more power-packed weeks of adventure, fun, activity, friendship and learning to establish their identity in Christ.

Comments from campers and parents at the end of the summer spoke to the efforts of the staff and the prayers of many:

"This year camp was as good as last year, if not better! I loved my cabin and my camp counselor!!"

"The interaction between [the] staff and my child made her feel comfortable in a new situation."

"GVR is the highlight of my summer. Every year it gets better. And the thing I love the most is the friendships I made."

News Nuggets is your publication. We strive to provide news and information expressing our church

Camper numbers at GVR held steady despite summer camp dates changing and other minor structural changes, due, in part, to new Colorado Childcare regulations. At Mills Spring Ranch, however, camper numbers jumped from 32 last summer to 70 this summer, bringing our overall camp numbers to nearly seven hundred. This was due largely to "some awesome marketing and shuttling in campers by the then MSR camp director, Matt Moreland," said Shannon Werner, Student Evangelism and Programs Coordinator for RMC.

At the end of GVR Teen week, with all of camp standing around the lake singing, five campers, Marina, Cecelia, DeeDee, Tatum and Hannah, committed their lives to Christ in baptism. As a memento to the occasion, each of the five young ladies received a package filled with items to encourage and support them in their new faith journey: a student study Bible; a copy of Steps to Christ; a notebook to record special verses, prayers and thoughts; Gummy Bears to remember that life with God is sweet; Sour Patch Kids because when life gets sour, God is still sweet; a water bottle to remember to stay hydrated with H2O and the Living Water; Legos as a reminder to always build with God; and Play-Doh to remember to always keep your heart soft so that God can continue to mold you.

Camp directors and staff rejoiced at the decisions made by the five teen campers to publicly declare their love for Jesus.

The lake-side celebration was a fitting conclusion to a summer of fun that was packed with new experiences, friendships, and opportunities to actively engage with the love of Jesus in the camp community.

life. Every church, every family, every individual has a story to tell. We are inviting pastors and secretaries of churches and institutions within the Rocky Mountain Conference to share with us relevant information -- about developments, issues, notable events, as well as experiences of church members.

Please email your story to nuggets@rmcsda.org so we can share how God is working through His people in your territory. When submitting your story, please include the following: the Ws (who, what, where, when, why...also how), a personal quote, a photo and the name of the photographer. Please consider time constraints and always send in fresh new stories instead of outdated ones. Submission deadlines are Wednesdays by noon.

Alumni Reunion at Campion Academy Reconnects Old Friends » If you missed alumni weekend this year, you missed a good one. I watched as friends reconnected, hugging and laughing with each other, even if they hadn't seen each other in decades. I observed their children becoming friends. I watched with sadness as the class of 1953 remembered their fellow classmates who are no longer around to celebrate these occasions and was reminded that there's a heavenly alumni reunion coming soon when we'll all celebrate together.

The weekend was filled with worship beginning Friday evening when we listened as Richard Lawry ('73) reminded us that if we miss Jesus, we miss it all. During Sabbath School, we heard reports on mission trips Campion students have recently taken, as well as the student-led evangelistic crusade called Wildfire. It was inspiring to hear how Campion students are not only participating in but leading out in evangelism.

In the worship hour, a quartet from the class of 1968 blessed us with special music. They were followed by our featured speaker Harold Alomia, whose sermon reminded us of the value in community. And really, isn't that what Campion is all about?

Saturday night, Union College led us in worship with a variety of fabulous musical groups and selections.

Throughout the weekend, Campion students led out in praise and worship. "I am always in awe of what a great job young people will do when given the opportunity to lead. Campion's musical groups sounded wonderful all weekend with bells, choir and orchestra," said Codi Jahn, Campion Alumni Board President.

Campion Students Pray With Their Community » As part of the Wednesday night Fusion at the end of September, students took to the streets of Loveland with an offer to pray with anyone who needed it. Divided into three groups, they stood on busy streets, including in front of the Loveland Church, Chick-Fil-A, and in front of campus.

“I know that people struggle during the day, so we were hoping that we could catch even just that one person who’s ready to give up, and pray with them,” explained Pastor Esequias Perea.

Milka Mendoza, sophomore at Champion, was part of the group that stood in front of Chick-Fil-A. “A lady stopped to talk with us, and she just started telling us about some of the struggles she had that day, and we were able to pray together,” she commented. “It was a really nice experience because we don’t do that on a daily basis, but we got to see God working in our lives. I got to share God’s love with someone I didn’t even know, and we got to pray together.”

At Champion, Wednesday night worships, called Fusion, are a break from sports and study hall and are meant to be a mid-week time to reconnect with God. Students can meet in small groups led by different staff members or join in outreach activities planned by Pastor Perea. “This year we are trying to do more things for the community outside of campus, to help students see the need there is in the community and to broaden their view of ministry,” he elaborated.

Champion’s spiritual theme this year is “Behold and Become.” Getting out to reach people in our community is part of that. “We are becoming Christ to the community,” Perea commented.

Practices for Adventist Ministry -- Statement from Adventist Women Clergy » In anticipation of the upcoming General Conference Annual Council, many women of the church, and many women who serve the church, are sensing themselves to be powerless, and disrespected as partners in the membership and mission of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Our presence and our voice are largely absent from this conversation, even though we note one of the proposed compliance subcommittees is clearly about us. As a group of approximately two hundred professional women clergy, we share the conviction that nothing ought to be about us, without us.

Additionally, we share a consensus of concern over proposals regarding governance that do not represent the heart of protestant faith, biblical fidelity or authentic Adventism; a document that advocates an overreach, if not abuse, of power that obviously misunderstands our unique governance system.

As professional clergy, we listen to, and pastor a North American Division membership concerned and troubled by this proposal. We appeal to our elected leaders (i.e. the following groups: General Conference Administrative Committee, General Conference and Division Officers, and the General Conference Executive Committee) for a careful assessment and even spiritual accountability of how this proposed compliance process represents best leadership practices for the Adventist Church. The proposed compliance committee process will take us far from our roots as a movement.

We remain in prayer for the Holy Spirit's guidance as we continue to uphold the mission of our church.

Speak to the Earth, and it Will Teach You » It's about this time of year, when the air gets a hint of chill in it and the trees start to turn red and gold, that my mind and heart wander back to Yosemite Valley where I spent the first four years out of college teaching outdoor school. This was my favorite season in Yosemite—a season when it seemed all nature breathed anticipation—every leaf gloriously present in the moment but eagerly hinting at what was to come. Time spent there in the Valley restored my soul. “The heavens declare the glory of God, and the sky above proclaims His handiwork.” (Psalm 19:1)

I'm currently reading the book, The Nature Fix: Why nature makes us happier, healthier, and more creative by Florence Williams. What's interesting is that a lot of the concepts shared in this book are principles the Bible has been telling us for centuries.

In her book, Florence writes about how nature affects our bodies through our different senses. She shares how psychology studies using birdsong consistently show improvements in mood and mental alertness.

Job says to ask the birds and they will tell you that life and breath come from God's hands. (Job 12:7-10)

Natural killer immune cells (a type of white blood cell that protects us from disease agents) are boosted by "aromatic volatile substances", otherwise known as "nice tree smells". These are essential oils emitted by evergreens and many other trees.

David sings of how God restores his soul in green pastures and beside still waters, anointing his head with oil. (Psalm 23:1-6)

Nature views are shown to support increased worker productivity, less job stress, higher academic grades and test scores and less aggression in inner-city residents. One researcher went further, proving that easy-to-process scenes such as those found in nature trigger the release of natural opiates in the brain. Studies show that when people walk in nature, they obsess over negative thoughts much less than when they walk in a city.

All those years ago, Jesus said if you're anxious to just consider the lilies, how they grow without toiling or stressing, yet even Solomon wasn't arrayed as gloriously as one of them. (Matthew 6:28-30)

Psychologist Roger Ulrich found that surgery patients who were assigned to a room with a window view of trees needed fewer postoperative days in the hospital, requested less pain medication and were described in nurses' notes as having better attitudes than those patients with window views of brick walls. Years before him, Florence Nightingale wrote, "It is the unqualified result of all my experience with the sick, that second only to their need of fresh air is their need of light.”

Japan, a country with the third highest suicide rate in the world, has begun using the practice of Forest Bathing as standard preventive medicine. This method supports healing and wellness through immersion in forests and other natural environments.

Within 200 milliseconds, people react positively when they see images of nature. Within 4-7 minutes in nature, you experience a decrease in heart rate, facial muscle tension, and changes in skin conductance. Within 15-20 minutes, you experience lower blood pressure, lower circulating cortisol and improved mood. At around 45-50 minutes of being in nature, many people show stronger cognitive performance as well as feelings of vitality and psychological reflection.

Martin Luther once said, “God writes the Gospel not in the Bible alone, but also on trees, and in the flowers and clouds and stars.”

On our last day of Outdoor School in Yosemite Valley, students do a solo hike through the meadow. Before I would send them off to soak up their surroundings, (and hopefully not get lost), I would read them one of my favorite passages from Steps to Christ: “God is love’ is written upon every opening bud, upon every spire of springing grass. The lovely birds making the air vocal with their happy songs, the delicately tinted flowers in their perfection perfuming the air, the lofty trees of the forest with their rich foliage of living green – all testify to the tender, fatherly care of our God and to His desire to make His children happy.” (Ellen G. White, Steps to Christ)

When we spend time in nature, I believe we experience God in a way that we can’t sitting in a pew or reading a book. There’s something special about feeling God’s love reflected in a golden leaf or the piney scent of the forest.

So why not step outside today, breathe in the fresh air, walk through the crunchy leaves, listen to the birds singing and see how God wants to restore you?

“For what can be known about God is plain to them, because God has shown it to them. For his invisible attributes, namely, his eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly perceived, ever since the creation of the world, in the things that have been made. So they are without excuse.”
(Romans 1:19-20)

FROM THE EDITOR

We want to share your news -- Change is a part of the communication age. With online media experiencing constant evolution, the NewsNuggets is also experiencing an increased access from our readers and contributors. We will continue to encourage news sharing from our churches, institutions, and individual church members.

In order to make our eNewsletter accommodate an increased volume of announcements, our editorial work proposes to present information in a more efficient approach, ensuring that all timely promotions and announcements be included in a weekly, Friday release of NewsNuggets. Submission deadline for stories, news, and announcements is at noon on every Wednesday. Please send all your submissions to nuggets@rmcsda.org.

Thank you for your contribution, but also comments, as NewsNuggets continues to serve the church in an efficient and effective way.

NOTE: Questions are being raised regarding guidelines for the Announcement section of the RMC NewsNuggets newsletter. After a review of the guidelines, the following few points should be considered when sending announcements or promotional materials:

- The newsletter has been established primarily for news sharing within the conference, though selected general church news stories are also considered for publication.
- The primary readership of the newsletter are church members within the Rocky Mountain Conference.
- When submitting an announcement, consider that local Sabbath events may be drawing members from other local churches.
- Promoting evangelistic meetings in NewsNuggets is not attracting potential attendees for whom the meetings are primarily advertised.
- Due to space constraints, NewsNuggets will not publish posters and other large photos or images. However, information from the text will be used.
- Announcements will not be repeated more than twice, and they should be concise. Web page links or phone numbers should be provided for additional information.

We are inviting all correspondents and contributors to follow a general Adventist News Network Style Guide, including glossary. For guidelines, see: <http://news.adventist.org/styleguide/>
